GLOBAL ACTION ON MEN'S HEALTH (GAMH)

REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES FOR THE YEAR ENDED 31 MARCH 2021

The trustees present their report with the financial statements of the charity for the year ended 31 March 2021. The trustees have adopted the provisions of Accounting and Reporting by Charities: Statement of Recommended Practice applicable to charities preparing their accounts in accordance with the Financial Reporting Standard applicable in the UK and Republic of Ireland (FRS 102) (effective 1 January 2019).

OBJECTIVES AND ACTIVITIES

Our mission

To create a world where all men and boys have the opportunity to achieve the best possible health and wellbeing wherever they live and whatever their backgrounds.

These are some of the problems GAMH exists to tackle:

- Globally, average male life expectancy at birth was 71 years in 2019. Average healthy life expectancy for men stood at 63 years. For women, life expectancy was 76 years and healthy life expectancy 65 years.
- There are wide variations between countries. A boy born in Japan or Switzerland in 2019 can expect to live for 82 years while a boy born in the same year in Lesotho can expect to die at 48, 34 years earlier.
- Over three million men have died worldwide following a COVID-19 infection, accounting for almost 60% of all deaths. On average, one man has died from COVID-19 approximately every 20 seconds since the start of the pandemic.
- Race has a major impact on health outcomes. Life expectancy for black males is eight years lower than for white males in the USA. For Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander males in Australia, life expectancy is about nine years lower than that of the non-Indigenous male population.

- Globally, men are twice as likely to die as a result of suicide. The age-standardised mortality rate for suicide was 16 per 100,000 for men compared to seven for women.
- Globally, and mainly because of a lack of engagement with primary care services, 25% of men with HIV are unaware of their status, 45% of men with HIV are not receiving anti-retroviral treatment, and 53% do not have a suppressed viral load.
- Just seven countries - Australia, Brazil, Iran, Ireland, Malaysia, Mongolia and South Africa - have published national health policies.

Our objectives

The promotion of the health of men and boys internationally for the public benefit, including by:

- Raising awareness of the health and wellbeing needs of men and boys with the general public, health practitioners and policy makers and in schools and workplaces.
- Encouraging and supporting men and boys to take better care of their own health and that of their partners and children.
- Carrying out multi-disciplinary research into the health of men and boys publishing the useful results of that research.
- Maintaining an approach to health that fully recognises the needs of both sexes in policy, practice and funding and which promotes greater gender equality.

Our unique role

GAMH has a distinct contribution to make because we:

- Uniquely represent a wide range of men's health and related organisations each of which has experience of policy development, advocacy, research and service delivery.
- Are concerned about a broad and cross-cutting range of men's health issues (e.g. health literacy, risk-taking behaviours, use of services, etc.).
- Focus primarily on public health and the social determinants of health.
- Have a strengths-based view of men and boys - this acknowledges men's unique contribution to all forms of social and human endeavour - and also believes that men should be held accountable for unacceptable behaviours, including gender-based violence.
- Are committed to working in partnership with other organisations, not in competition with them.
- Support an approach to health that takes full account of sex and gender in order to improve the health of both men and women.

Activities

GAMH was established in 2013. Launched during International Men's Health Week in June 2014 and officially registered as a UK-based charity in May 2019. During 2020/21, we delivered an active work programme on several fronts.

GLOBAL ACTION ON MEN'S HEALTH (GAMH)

COVID-19

The period covered by this report was dominated by the global pandemic. It quickly became clear, based on data from an increasing number of countries, that men were much more likely than women to fall seriously ill and to die from COVID-19. The pandemic clearly constituted the most immediate and urgent threat to the health and wellbeing of men for the foreseeable future. By the end of March 2021, well over 1.5 million men worldwide had died as a direct result of COVID-19 infection.

The explanations for men's increased risk were a mixture of biology (a weaker immune response in men), a higher incidence of underlying health problems that increased vulnerability to serious COVID-19 disease (eg. hypertension, diabetes, lung disease), behaviours (eg. poorer hand hygiene, weaker compliance with social distancing and mask-wearing), and social factors (such as the types of work men are more likely to be engaged in). There were also health system issues, in particular the historic neglect of men's health in policy and practice, evidenced by the absence of male-specific messaging to men in regard to COVID prevention practices.

GAMH responded by, first, organising a webinar for its members and others with an interest in the issue. This took place in April 2020 and the discussion was informed by a presentation on COVID-19's impact on men by GAMH member Alan White, Emeritus Professor of Men's Health at Leeds Beckett University (UK).

The webinar was followed by the publication in May 2020 of a GAMH statement on COVID-19 and men. This called for:

- Gender-responsive actions at the global, national and local levels that take full account of the specific needs of men and boys as well as women and girls during the pandemic and its aftermath.
- The collection and fast-track publication of sex-disaggregated data on COVID-19 infection and mortality at all levels.
- Data must also be further disaggregated to show how outcomes by sex intersect with age, income, race and other key variables.
- Research to understand better the causes of men's higher mortality and how it can most effectively be addressed. This must take full account of the intersectional impacts.
- Research into the wider impact of COVID-19 on the mental and physical health of men and boys as well as on issues concerning their employment, education, personal relationships and family life. Account should be taken of new opportunities to increase men's involvement in parenting and caring and to improve work/life balance through greater home-working.
- The development and deployment of gender-responsive health promotion interventions to reduce men's risk of infection. Evidence of good practice in this field should be rapidly and widely disseminated.
- Sustained support for organisations supporting men and boys, including for employment, education, mental health, alcohol and gambling issues. Organisations that work with male perpetrators and male victims of domestic violence also have an important role to play.
- A focus on addressing the underlying conditions that are linked to men's higher mortality from COVID-19 and which in their own right have a significant impact on men's health outcomes.

This statement was widely disseminated, including through the Gender and COVID-19 Working Group. This is a multi-disciplinary global network of researchers and advocates which came together to analyse and address the gendered impacts of COVID-19 - inclusive of cis and trans women and men, and gender minorities - and inequities in pandemic preparedness and response.

GAMH Director Peter Baker was among the first members of the Group and, in partnership with GAMH member Prof Derek Griffith, established the Men and COVID-19 Sub-Group. This met several times during the year to discuss different aspects of COVID-19's impact on men and helped to keep the Working Group as a whole aware of men's issues. One of the key outputs of the Sub-Group was the preparation of a blog for BMJ Global Health on the neglect of men in policy responses to the pandemic. The blog was published in April 2021.

GAMH was involved in other significant publications on COVID-19, in particular a comment piece in The Lancet published in June 2020. Co-authored by Peter Baker, Prof Alan White and Dr Rosemary Morgan from Johns Hopkins University (USA), this explained why the pandemic highlighted the need for policy action on men's health. GAMH members Prof James Smith, Derek Griffith, Alan White, with Peter Baker and others, co-authored a paper on COVID-19, equity and men's health for the International Journal on Men's Social and Community Health (published July 2020) and Peter Baker contributed a blog on gender, COVID-19 and NCDs to the NCD Alliance (published April 2020).

A major paper looking at how the impact of COVID-19 varies by gender, taking account of both men and women, was prepared for publication by several co-authors, including GAMH members Derek Griffith, Alan White, Dr Amon Ashaba Mwiine and Peter Baker. This was published by Frontiers in Sociology in June 2021.

We conducted a survey of GAMH members on men and COVID-19 which helped us identify the issues of biggest concern. The findings, which were published in September 2020, highlighted five particular areas where action was needed:

- Supporting men dealing with the employment/financial consequences of COVID-19.
- Tackling the underlying conditions that put men at greater risk.
- Reducing men's exposure at work.
- Making health services generally easier to access.
- Supporting men dealing with the mental health consequences.

Throughout the year, GAMH kept its members and others up-to-date with research and policy developments on men and COVID-19 through its monthly eBulletin and Twitter. These communications helped to inform the work of national and local men's health organisations on the pandemic.

FROM THE MARGINS TO THE MAINSTREAM

Following a generous grant from AAA (Advanced Accelerator Applications, which is part of Novartis), GAMH published a scoping study on men's health policy in International Men's Health Week in June 2020. From the Margins to the Mainstream: Advocating the inclusion of men's health in policy, examined the policy response to men's health to date, the barriers to policy development, the currently-available opportunities and, most importantly, the policy priorities and the next steps necessary for their achievement through effective advocacy.

The report's findings were shared and discussed at two webinars, one in June and one in July 2020, and members were also asked to share in writing their thoughts on the report. The feedback was included in a shorter follow-up report, From the Margins to the Mainstream: Next Steps to achieving the inclusion of men's health in policy (published November 2020). This set out GAMH's four main calls for action:

- International, national and local men's health policies, with effective governance, funding, implementation and monitoring.
- Gender and health policies that include men.
- Men's health to be included in all appropriate health policies, in areas such as cancer, cardiovascular disease, mental health, sexual health and diabetes as well as COVID-19.
- Education and training programmes in gender generally and men's health specifically for health policymakers and practitioners.

The report also described the steps GAMH will take to make our advocacy work more effective. These included:

- Identifying men's health policies that are focused and aligned with current health global policy priorities.
- Developing an approach based on 'proportionate universalism', equity and intersectionality.
- Supporting gender equality.
- Supporting calls for more diverse leadership in global health policy.
- Seeking the publication of a definitive report which collates and analyses the state of men's health at all levels.
- Making the case that investing in men's health is cost-effective.
- Building alliances.
- Working with the Lancet's Gender and Health Commission.
- Developing closer relationships with WHO officials globally and regionally.
- Developing practical guidance for policymakers, practitioners and service providers.

A blog summarising the findings of the first report was posted by the UCL Centre for Gender and Global Health in June 2020 and a paper was published in Trends in Urology and Men's Health in November 2020.

In the last quarter of the year, we began to progress actively two of these steps. We received funding from AAA to develop a resource to provide practical guidance to policymakers, practitioners and service providers. (A report, Delivering Men's Health, and a database were launched in September 2021.) We also began a collaboration with Women in Global Health on a joint paper on COVID-19, gender and health which was published as a BMJ blog in July 2021.

GOVERNANCE

Considerable effort has gone into improving the governance of the charity. Following an audit of Board members, a commitment was made to increase the diversity of the Board, particularly in terms of race, the countries represented and the first language of members. We were pleased to achieve our immediate goals during 2020/21 and will continue to keep this issue under review.

A new membership scheme was launched in January 2020 and implemented during 2020/21. Combined with a new streamlined payments system using PayPal, we have been able to process membership fee payments and to recruit new members much more easily.

We were pleased to welcome several new organisational and individual members in 2020/21. The organisations included the Pole of Expertise and Research on Men's Health and Wellbeing (Canada), Ndola Nutrition Organisation (Zambia) and UNASCAD (Haiti). We now have members in every continent but remain keen to recruit more from areas currently under-represented.

It should be noted that the GAMH Director, Peter Baker, works on a part-time consultancy basis for GAMH. His contribution is largely dependent on GAMH's prevailing financial position and, for 2020/21, averaged 5.5 days a month. It is acknowledged that Peter often works additional hours on a pro bono basis, particularly at times when resources are more constrained. There are no other staff employed on any basis by the organisation.

The Board recognises that there is a pressing need to improve the organisation's financial position and will continue to seek income that will enable it to extend its work and enhance its influence.

COMMUNICATIONS

GAMH communicates with its members and a wider group of stakeholders via its website and Twitter account. Members and other subscribers also receive a monthly eBulletin providing news and information about GAMH and other global men's health issues. During 2020/21, GAMH established a dedicated YouTube channel which hosts recordings of our webinars. Work also began on refreshing and updating the website, a process that was largely completed by International Men's Health Week in June 2021.

In October 2020, we were delighted to announce that the International Journal of Men's Social and Community Health had become GAMH's official journal. This arrangement should increase use of the Journal, encourage publication of more papers aligned with our policy priorities, and provide a discounted article processing charge to GAMH members. Since the announcement, GAMH chair Anthony Brown and Peter Baker have met regularly with the Journal's editor, Prof Steve Robertson (a GAMH member) and its publisher, John Birkby.

Strategic context

GAMH is operating in a global health policy environment which is beginning to show a greater interest in the health and wellbeing of men. Seven countries have now published national men's health policies as has one province (Quebec) and one WHO region (Europe). We know that PAHO, the WHO region for the Americas, is actively considering a men's health policy and that the WHO Western Pacific region is interested in developing a men's health work programme.

The Lancet Commission on Gender and Health, which is expected to report in 2022, is believed to be sympathetic to our issues and, very helpfully, two of our members have been appointed as commissioners. COVID-19, because of its particular impact on men's health, has also helped to focus attention on our issues. We are hopeful that our proposals for action will continue to attract interest and gain traction.

Concluding comments

GAMH's trustees believe that, despite limited financial resources and staff capacity, significant progress was made throughout the year towards the achievement of GAMH's objectives. Organisational governance was strengthened, communications with members and external stakeholders continued to improve and a major report and several important papers were published and disseminated. We were able to highlight the importance of addressing men and COVID-19 with professional audiences via a range of publications as well as social media. However, the sheer scale of the pandemic's impact, and its implications for almost every aspect of men's health, highlights the need to increase our capacity so we can not only provide greater support for our members' work but also achieve our goals to improve global and national policy response to men's health and, ultimately of course, men's health and wellbeing outcomes.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

Financial position

The charity has made a surplus of £21,092 (2020: £14,367) during the period.

At the year-end date the Charity had £35,459 (2020: £14,367) in unrestricted funds. The trustees' ideal reserves level would be in the region of £16,000 which equates to approximately twelve months running costs.
